

close

close takes no arguments

You can use close (in some installations) to release material to the display device that is currently retained in main memory buffers. This is usually used if the display is a hardcopy device.